WHAT IS ORGANISATION OF CHOICE

Certification that means something.

Organisation of Choice™ is an independent workplace certification programme that recognises employers who genuinely invest in their people. We assess organisations across their culture, policies, systems, and — most importantly — the lived experience of their employees, measured against global best practice.

Unlike awards that can be bought or rankings based on self-reported surveys alone, OOC certification is earned through a structured, multi-stakeholder assessment. Employees, leadership, and independent assessors all contribute evidence. Every certified organisation has met a published standard, verified by people with no stake in the outcome.

It's not just a badge. It's proof.

WHY CERTIFICATION PAYS

The business case for being an Organisation of Choice.

Attract & retain talent.

Candidates increasingly choose employers on culture, not compensation alone. Certification gives them an independent reason to choose you — and gives your current people one more reason to stay.

Build a credible employer brand.

Use the OOC mark across your careers page, job listings, and social channels. Third-party validation says what self-promotion cannot.

Improve with evidence.

The assessment doesn't just score you — it shows you exactly where to act. Every certified organisation receives a detailed report with benchmarks and prioritised recommendations.

Stand out to every stakeholder.

Clients, investors, and business partners read workplace quality as a signal of governance and sustainability. Certification strengthens the story you tell all of them.

HOW IT WORKS

Three steps to certification.

1. Apply.

Tell us about your organisation and the scope you want certified — the whole organisation, or specific locations and divisions. We confirm eligibility and agree the assessment plan with you.

2. Get assessed.

Our multi-stakeholder assessment gathers structured evidence from employees, leadership, and independent assessors through our digital platform, evaluated against the published OOC framework.

3. Get certified.

Receive your certification level — Bronze, Silver, or Gold — along with a detailed report, your public directory listing, and the OOC certification mark for your employer brand.

CERTIFICATION LEVELS

Bronze. Silver. Gold. A pathway, not just a plaque.

Bronze recognises organisations with strong foundations: compliant, fair, and well-run workplaces with the essential people practices in place.

Silver recognises organisations that go further: demonstrated employee engagement, mature people systems, and a working culture of continuous improvement.

Gold recognises exceptional employers: industry-leading practices, outstanding employee experience, and a workplace others benchmark against.

Wherever you start, the framework shows you the path to the next level.

ABOUT

HERO

Making workplace quality visible.

Organisation of Choice™ exists for a simple reason: the organisations that treat their people well deserve to be recognised for it — and the people choosing where to work deserve a signal they can trust.

OUR STORY

Our story.

Every year, organisations invest enormously in their people — in fair policies, in careful leadership, in workplaces where employees can do the best work of their careers. And every year, most of that investment remains invisible to the outside world. A careers page can claim anything; a job advertisement costs nothing to embellish. The employers doing the real work have had no rigorous, independent way to prove it.

Organisation of Choice™ was founded by Ketaki, [PLACEHOLDER; founder designation], to close that gap. Drawing on experience across [PLACEHOLDER; founder background summary], she built OOC around a conviction: that workplace quality can be assessed with the same rigour the world applies to financial statements or product safety — through evidence, multiple perspectives, and independent verification.

Today, Organisation of Choice™ operates as an independent certification programme of Carbon Value Partners Private Limited, assessing employers across India against a framework built on global best practice. Every certification we award is earned, evidenced, and annually verified.

MISSION AND VISION

Our mission.

To recognise and certify employers who demonstrably invest in their people, through independent, multi-stakeholder assessment — and to give talent everywhere a trustworthy signal of where great workplaces can be found.

Our vision.

A working world in which workplace quality is as visible, comparable, and valued as financial performance — and in which being an organisation of choice is every employer's ambition.

WHAT MAKES US DIFFERENT

Why our certification holds its value.

We are independent. Certification cannot be purchased, and assessment outcomes are never negotiable. Our assessors have no commercial stake in any organisation's result, and our criteria are published for anyone to read. When an organisation carries the OOC mark, it is because the evidence supported it.

We assess from every angle. A workplace looks different from the boardroom than it does from the floor. That is why our framework gathers structured input from multiple assessor groups — employees, leadership, and independent evaluators — across every dimension of the employment experience. No single perspective can carry a certification on its own.

We certify improvement, not perfection. The Bronze, Silver, and Gold levels exist because building a great workplace is a journey. Our detailed assessment reports show every organisation exactly where it stands and precisely what would move it forward. Certification with us is the beginning of a relationship, not the end of a transaction.

TEAM AND GOVERNANCE

The people behind the programme.

Organisation of Choice™ is led by its founder and supported by a team of assessors, advisors, and programme specialists who share one standard: every certification must be defensible on the evidence.

THE CERTIFICATION

HERO

Certification you can stand behind.

Every Organisation of Choice™ certification is the outcome of a structured, evidence-based, multi-stakeholder assessment. This page explains exactly how it works — because a certification is only as credible as the process behind it.

WHAT WE ASSESS

What we assess.

The OOC framework examines the full employment experience, organised into assessment sections covering the areas that matter most to a workplace: leadership and culture; policies and fairness; compensation and benefits practices; learning and career development; wellbeing and safety; diversity, equity and inclusion; communication and voice; and the systems that hold it all together. Each section is assessed on both what the organisation has put in place and how employees actually experience it.

Evidence is gathered from multiple assessor groups for every section — because a policy that exists on paper but not in practice should not earn certification. Responses are collected in structured formats suited to each group, from verified documentary evidence to employee experience ratings, and certain fundamentals operate as mandatory gates: an organisation cannot compensate for failing them with strong scores elsewhere.

THE ASSESSMENT PROCESS

The process, stage by stage.

1. Application & scoping ([PLACEHOLDER; duration]).

You tell us about your organisation and choose the scope of certification — the whole organisation, or defined locations, divisions, or entities. We confirm eligibility, agree the assessment plan, and set the timeline together.

2. Evidence & self-assessment ([PLACEHOLDER; duration]).

Your organisation completes the structured self-assessment on our digital platform and uploads supporting evidence. Our team reviews submissions as they arrive, so gaps are surfaced early rather than at the end.

3. Multi-stakeholder assessment ([PLACEHOLDER; duration]).

Employees contribute their experience through confidential structured input; leadership responses are verified against evidence; and independent assessors evaluate every section of the framework. No certification rests on a single voice.

4. Review & determination ([PLACEHOLDER; duration]).

The lead assessor consolidates all inputs, applies the published scoring model, confirms every mandatory gate has been met, and signs the assessment declaration. The outcome — including your level — is determined solely by the evidence.

5. Certification & beyond.

You receive your certification, your detailed report with benchmarks and recommendations, your public directory listing, and the OOC mark for your employer brand. Certification is verified annually, and a full reassessment keeps it current — so the mark always means what it says.

CERTIFICATION LEVELS

The three levels of certification.

Bronze — Strong foundations.

Bronze certification signifies a fair, compliant, well-run workplace: sound policies, essential people systems in place, and no failures on any mandatory criterion. For many organisations Bronze is the honest, credible starting point — public recognition that the fundamentals are genuinely in place, with a clear report showing the route to Silver.

Silver — Engaged and improving.

Silver certification signifies an organisation whose investment in people is producing measurable results: employees report a genuinely positive experience, people systems are mature and consistently applied, and improvement is systematic rather than occasional. Silver-certified employers stand out clearly in their talent markets.

Gold — An employer others benchmark against.

Gold certification is reserved for exceptional workplaces: industry-leading practices, an outstanding and consistent employee experience across every assessed dimension, and evidence of innovation in how people are led, developed, and cared for. Gold-certified organisations are the reference point for their sector.

SCORING & CRITERIA

How scoring works.

Every section of the framework is scored from the combined input of all assessor groups, and section scores aggregate into an overall result that maps to a certification level. Thresholds for Bronze, Silver, and Gold are published and applied identically to every organisation: [PLACEHOLDER; level thresholds].

Mandatory criteria operate independently of the score. These are the non-negotiables of a legitimate workplace — matters of legal compliance, safety, and fair treatment — and an organisation that does not meet them cannot be certified at any level, regardless of its performance elsewhere. This is what keeps every OOC certification meaningful.

Alongside the outcome, every assessed organisation receives its full scoring summary: section-by-section results, benchmarks against comparable organisations, and the lead assessor's prioritised recommendations. Organisations that fall short of certification receive the same detailed report, and may be reassessed after addressing the gaps — because the purpose of the framework is better workplaces, not gatekeeping for its own sake.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

How long does certification take?

Most organisations complete the journey from application to certification in [PLACEHOLDER; typical duration]. The largest variable is how quickly evidence and stakeholder inputs are completed on your side; our team supports you throughout to keep the process moving.

Who conducts the assessment?

Assessments are conducted through the OOC digital platform and evaluated by trained assessors who are independent of your organisation, with a lead assessor accountable for the final determination. Employee input is gathered confidentially and reported only in aggregate.

What does certification cost?

Fees depend on organisation size and the scope being certified. Current fee structure: [PLACEHOLDER; pricing tiers]. Your application confirmation will include an exact quotation before any commitment is required.

How long does certification last?

Certification is valid for [PLACEHOLDER; validity period], with annual verification in between and a full reassessment at renewal. Organisations that improve can move up a level at reassessment.

What if we don't achieve the level we hoped for?

You receive the complete assessment report either way, including exactly what would be required to reach the next level. Many of our strongest certified employers began with a lower level and a clear plan.

Is our assessment data confidential?

Yes. Your detailed results are shared only with you. The public record is your certification level, scope, and validity — never your underlying scores or evidence. Employee responses are confidential and never attributed to individuals.

FOR EMPLOYERS

HERO

You've built a great workplace. Now prove it.

Organisation of Choice™ certification converts the culture you've invested in into independent, public, verifiable proof — the kind that wins candidates, reassures clients, and strengthens every part of your employer brand.

Apply for Certification

THE PROBLEM WE SOLVE

Every employer claims great culture. Almost none can prove it.

Talent markets run on trust, and trust is in short supply. Candidates have learned to discount what careers pages say about culture, because every organisation says the same things. Meanwhile, the employers genuinely doing the work — fair policies, real development, leadership that listens — struggle to distinguish themselves from those who merely claim it.

Independent certification resolves the standoff. When an external assessor with published criteria and no commercial stake in your result confirms that your workplace meets a rigorous standard, your claims stop being marketing and start being evidence. That is what the OOC mark puts behind every job listing, every offer letter, and every conversation with a candidate who is weighing you against someone else.

WHAT YOU RECEIVE

What certification includes.

- The OOC certification mark — licensed for your careers page, job listings, email signatures, offices, and marketing, for the full validity period.
- Your public directory listing — a verified profile in the Certified Employer Directory, seen by candidates researching where to work.
- The full assessment report — section-by-section scores, benchmarks against comparable organisations, and prioritised recommendations.
- A certification announcement toolkit — ready-to-use assets and guidance for announcing your certification internally and externally.
- Annual verification — the ongoing check that keeps your certification current and credible.
- A pathway to the next level — a clear, evidenced route from Bronze to Silver to Gold.

THE PROCESS FOR YOU

What the journey looks like from your side.

Certification is designed to run alongside your normal operations, not on top of them. After application and scoping, your team completes a structured self-assessment and evidence submission through our digital platform — most organisations assign a single coordinator and involve function heads only where their area is being evidenced. Employee input is gathered confidentially and efficiently, with no burden on your HR team to administer it.

From application to certification typically takes [PLACEHOLDER; typical duration], and our programme team stays with you throughout: clarifying requirements, flagging evidence gaps early, and keeping the timeline honest. You will always know where you are in the process and what happens next. The full stage-by-stage detail is on our certification page.

See the full assessment process →

PRICING

Transparent, size-based pricing.

Certification fees are based on the size of your organisation and the scope you choose to certify — nothing else. There are no charges tied to your result: an organisation that achieves Gold pays the same as one of equal size that achieves Bronze, because outcomes are never for sale.

[PLACEHOLDER; pricing tiers]

Every application receives a written quotation before any commitment is required, and the fee covers the full assessment, your report, certification, directory listing, and annual verification for the validity period.

FOR JOB SEEKERS

HERO

Choose your next employer on proof, not promises.

Every organisation in this directory has earned independent certification of its workplace — assessed on evidence, verified annually, and never for sale. If they're listed here, they've proven it.

Search the directory

WHY IT MATTERS

Why look for the OOC mark.

Choosing an employer is one of the biggest decisions you make, and it's usually made on the least reliable information: a polished careers page, a well-rehearsed interview, and reviews you can't verify. Every organisation tells you its culture is great. Very few can show you independent evidence.

OOO-certified employers can. Certification means the organisation opened itself to a structured, multi-stakeholder assessment — including the confidential input of its own employees — and met a published standard verified by independent assessors. The certification level tells you more still: Bronze means the fundamentals are genuinely in place; Silver means employees report a demonstrably positive experience within mature people systems; Gold means a workplace that others benchmark against.

None of this replaces your own judgement — interview well, ask hard questions, trust your instincts. But it changes your starting point. You begin from verified evidence rather than marketing, and that is a meaningfully better place to make a career decision from.

HOW TO USE THE DIRECTORY

Three ways to use this directory.

Research an offer. Weighing an offer in hand? Search the organisation. If it's certified, you'll see its level, certified scope, and validity — independent context no interview will give you.

Discover employers worth watching. Filter by industry, location, and certification level to build a shortlist of organisations that have proven their standards — including strong employers you may never have heard of.

Verify a claim. If an employer displays the OOC mark, confirm it here. Every legitimate certification appears in this directory with its scope and validity period; if it isn't listed, it isn't certified.

DIRECTORY

Certified Employer Directory.

Search and filters: Search by organisation name • Industry • Location • Certification level (Bronze / Silver / Gold)

Empty state: No certified employers match your current filters. Try widening your search — or check back soon: new organisations are certified throughout the year.

Glossary.

The language of workplace certification, in plain terms.

Assessment scope. The defined boundary of a certification — the whole organisation, or specific locations, divisions, or entities. The scope always appears alongside the certification in the public directory.

Assessor group. One of the distinct perspectives contributing evidence to an assessment — including employees, leadership, and independent assessors. Every section of the framework draws on multiple assessor groups.

Certification level. The tier awarded on certification — Bronze, Silver, or Gold — reflecting the overall assessment result against published thresholds.

Certification mark. The Organisation of Choice™ badge licensed to certified employers for use across their employer brand during the validity period.

Certified Employer Directory. The public register of all current OOC certifications, searchable by industry, location, and level. If a certification is valid, it appears here.

Employee experience. How employees actually encounter the workplace day to day — distinct from what policies say. OOC assessment measures both, and weights lived experience heavily.

Employer brand. An organisation's reputation as a place to work, as perceived by candidates, employees, and alumni. Certification converts internal reality into external, verifiable brand evidence.

Employer of choice. A widely used HR term for an organisation that talent actively prefers. Organisation of Choice™ certification makes the claim testable.

Independent assessment. Evaluation conducted by assessors with no commercial stake in the outcome, against published criteria. The foundation of the OOC programme's credibility.

Lead assessor. The accountable assessor who consolidates all evidence, applies the scoring model, and signs the declaration behind every certification decision.

Mandatory criteria. Non-negotiable requirements — typically matters of legal compliance, safety, and fair treatment — that must be met in full for certification at any level, regardless of scores elsewhere.

Multi-stakeholder assessment. The OOC methodology of gathering structured evidence from several assessor groups for every assessed area, so that no certification rests on a single perspective.

Reassessment. The full assessment conducted at the end of a certification's validity period, which renews the certification and can move an organisation to a higher level.

Scoring summary. The consolidated results document showing section-by-section scores, benchmarks, and the overall determination — provided in full to the assessed organisation.

Validity period. The period for which a certification remains current, subject to annual verification: [PLACEHOLDER; validity period].

Verification (annual). The yearly check between full assessments confirming that a certified organisation continues to meet the standard.

Frequently asked questions.

For employers.

Is certification suitable for small organisations?

Yes. The framework scales with organisation size, and fees are size-based: [PLACEHOLDER; pricing tiers]. Smaller employers often benefit most, because certification gives them a credibility signal that usually only large employer brands enjoy.

Can we certify part of our organisation?

Yes. You define the scope at application — the whole organisation, or specific locations, divisions, or entities. The certified scope is always stated in the public directory, so the mark is never used more broadly than it was earned.

What happens if we fail a mandatory criterion?

Certification cannot be awarded until the criterion is met, whatever the rest of the assessment shows. You receive the full report identifying the gap, and may be reassessed once it is addressed.

Will our detailed results be made public?

No. The public record is your certification level, scope, and validity period. Your scores, evidence, and report remain confidential to you.

For job seekers.

Does certification guarantee I'll be happy at an organisation?

No certification can promise that — fit is personal. What it guarantees is that the organisation met an independently verified standard across its policies, systems, and employee experience. It's a far stronger starting point than marketing claims, used best alongside your own research and judgement.

An employer displays the OOC mark but isn't in the directory. What does that mean?

Every valid certification appears in the directory. If an organisation displays the mark but has no listing, its certification may have lapsed or the usage may be unauthorised — we'd ask you to report it via the contact page so we can investigate.

Does it cost anything to use the directory?

No. The directory is free, public, and requires no registration.

For partners.

Who can become a channel partner?

Professional firms and advisors who serve employers — including HR and CSR consultants, chartered accountancy firms, company secretaries, ESG advisors, legal firms, and industry associations. The partner page describes the tiers and application process.

Do partners influence assessment outcomes?

Never. Partners introduce and support client organisations through the process; assessment and determination are conducted wholly independently. This separation protects the value of the certification your clients earn.

CHANNEL PARTNERS

HERO

Grow your practice by growing great workplaces.

The Organisation of Choice™ partner programme lets consultants, advisors, and professional firms bring independent workplace certification to the clients they already serve — adding client value and a new revenue stream in the same move.

Apply to Partner

WHY PARTNER

What partnership gives your practice.

A natural extension of the advice you already give. If your clients ask you about talent, retention, governance, compliance, or brand, certification is a concrete next step you can put on the table — one with a defined process, a credible outcome, and visible client value. You bring the relationship and the context; the OOC programme brings the framework, the platform, and the assessment.

Revenue that compounds with your client base. Partners earn a share of certification revenue for every client organisation they introduce, on transparent commercial terms: [PLACEHOLDER; partner commercial terms]. Because certification renews, partner income recurs alongside it — a client introduced once continues to generate value across the relationship.

Support that respects your expertise. Partners receive programme training, co-branded marketing materials, a named programme contact, and priority visibility of client progress through the certification journey. What partners never carry is assessment risk: evaluation and determination are wholly independent, which protects both your client relationship and the value of the mark your clients earn.

WHO WE PARTNER WITH

Built for firms that advise employers.

HR & CSR consultants • Chartered accountancy firms • Company secretaries • ESG advisors • Green finance advisors • Export consultants • Legal firms • Industry associations

If your firm serves employers in another capacity and sees the fit, we'd still like to hear from you — the application form includes space to tell us about your practice.

PARTNER TIERS

Three tiers. One standard.

Every partner joins at Silver tier and progresses on results. Tier reflects the scale and maturity of the partnership — commercial terms, enablement, and visibility grow with it. Advancement criteria: [PLACEHOLDER; tier advancement criteria].

Silver tier.

The starting point for every partner: full programme training, the partner marketing kit, a named programme contact, and standard commercial terms on every client introduced.

Gold tier.

For established partners with an active client pipeline: enhanced commercial terms, co-marketing opportunities including joint events and content, and priority programme support.

Platinum tier.

The programme's strategic partners: the strongest commercial terms, first access to new certifications and programme developments, joint go-to-market planning, and public recognition as a Platinum-tier partner of Organisation of Choice™.
